GMA leaves St. Luke's, departs for Europe today

By Gil C. Cabanag Jr. and Fe Zamora

WITH THE COUNTRY'S 115,000 policemen on nationwide alert, President Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday checked out of the hospital to prepare for her 32nd foreign trip to be crowned by a private audience with Pope Benedict XVI at the Vatican.

The full alert went into effect at 8 a.m. yesterday and will last until the president departs on July 2 from her trip to Italy, Vatican City and Spain, Philippine National Police spokesperson Senior Supt. Samuel Paghila said.

She is scheduled to leave the Rome at 10 a.m. today.

The full alert is police standard op-

ALL THIS, AND FAULT-LESS, TOO: When geologists say there's no place in the country like Palawan, they mean the gorgeous beaches and the lush forests and mangroves like this one in Basingway Bay near Bantayan in the capital city of Puerto Princesa. But more so, being more of science, they mean Palawan rests on a stable belt where earthquakes have not occurred the past 10,000 years.

NO VOLCANOES, QUAKE

Palawan: RP's safest province

By Blanche S. Rivera

WHEN GEOLOGISTS SAY THERE IS NO place in the Philippines like Palawan, they are not talking about its gorgeous beaches and rich forests.

It is the only province in the country that lies on a stable belt, where faults are mostly inactive or have not caused earthquakes in more than 10,000 years, according to the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology (PHIVOLCS).

Located between the islands of Minandanao and Bohol, Palawan is almost fully land-locked referring to lands or zones of weakness in rocks along which displacements had occurred or can occur again.

While the rest of the country experiences 20 to 25 earthquakes a day or up to 9,120 earthquakes a year, Palawan rests safely on its white sand shores, with perhaps the only destructive machine coming from the waves of its tropic seas.

"It's actually the most ideal place to build high rise structures, not Manila," PHIVOLCS deputy director Bart Bautista told the Inquirer in an interview.

"When people ask us about what design is appropriate in Palawan, we tell them they can build following any design because the ground is Palawan is stable; it's even a good place to build nuclear plants if they want," seismology chief Edmundo Nang said.

Nang and earthquake in Palawan were "possible but not likely" considering its history.

Located approximately 240 km southwest of Manila, Palawan is known as the "Philippines' last unspoiled frontier," its rich forests being home to 232 wildlife species.

Palawan has a total land area of 1.48 million hectares and is composed of 1,780 islands and islets, with about 17,000 km of irregular coastline that are rich fishing areas.

The province has been spared from earthquakes for more than 30,000 years.

The last earthquake-related disaster that hit Palawan was a tsunami in 1997, landing on Palawan's southern shores with 10-meter high waves. The

GOODBYE TO DEATH PENALTY

Maggie: There's no escaping law of karma

By Jerry E. Espinosa

AS PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO
expunged the death penalty from the statute books yesterday, two women whose rape sent four young men to the electric chair says it is just reward for people sometimes to pay with their lives for the wrong they commit.

That is karma, says Maggie de la Riva.
In June 1967, the then 25-year-old movie actress was abducted from her car by four men and taken to Sumbay Hotel in Pampanga, where they took turns raping her.

After four years of investigation and trial, the Supreme Court affirmed the death penalty imposed on Jaime Ave, Benito Pineda Jr., Edgardo Aquino and Rodolfo Canal for the crime of forcible abduction with rape. They hanged in 1972.

Reached by phone hours after Ms. Arroyo signed the bill abolishing capital punishment, De la Riva said: "I have grown with the times...I am not for or against the death penalty per se."

"As far as I am concerned, the death penalty is a natural consequence of the violation of the natural law, which is karma. Some people deserve the death penalty for some doing."

De la Riva said rape victims should not look at the death penalty "as a source of vengeance."

"Some rape victims are capable of rehabilitation and are repentant, why push for the death penalty? It's a case to case thing."

Abolishing the death penalty is "not a yes or no thing," she said, adding: "There are also many gray areas."

"Five years ago, I would have said if someone is convicted and sentenced, as it is," De la Riva said. "Today, I say even as he is convicted, if there is a threat of renewal in him, if he can still be rehabilitated, let's give him a second chance."

In an interview with the Inquirer last week, De la Riva said the execution of the four men convicted of raping her in 1967 "signaled a closed chapter of her life in my life." She called it the "triumph of justice and the reawakening of karma in the life of the guilty."

Without referring to the ongoing
"Winky" rape trial, De la Riva said that "one of the consequences of filing a case in court is losing your privacy. But that's for a greater cause—seeking justice, that is."

"I didn't go through all that drama of losing my identity. I never entered my mind to go unscathed. Why? I was fighting for my rights...to why should I hide my heart?"

De la Riva spoke of the death penalty
as a deterrent to crime in an interview with the Inquirer in 1999 amid the public anger over the rape of a young girl by her stepfather, Leo Echegaray.

In that article, she had asserted:
"Many say that capital punishment is not a deterrent to crime, but I beg to disagree. It is still the greatest deterrent, as was proven by the execution of my assailants in 1972, where for the next five

CHR: Still no proof of death squads but...

By Norman Bernardino

THE COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS has no convincing evidence of the existence of so-called death squads after several months but a commission said it would not be surprised if government forces were guilty.

Commissioner Desiderio Cabalona, CHR officer in charge, said he believes the commission would soon take up the troubling killings of members of leftist groups. Leftists said security officials had targeted legal leaders of the New People's Army, the armed component of the Communist Party of the Philippines.

"No, we still have no information, either direct," said Cabalona who added that the commission of military deaths would be going after members of militant groups, particularly in the countryside.

"But I would not be surprised if we find out that they are involved. They have the means and the weapons," said Cabalona, a long-time CHR member who had often in southern Philippines and the Visayas before becoming commission chairman.

Cabalona is wary to rely on the help of the CHR to look at cases. Public Hearing Commission which is abundant and is not expected back until mid-July.

"We will probably have meetings with the representatives of the army and the PNP (Philippine National Police). We'd want to know how come the killings continue and why they remain unresolved," Cabalona said.

Cabalona said that despite the lack of information by the PNP of Truth Sector Unit to look into the killings of militants and journalists and to bring them before the courts. The killings go on and as there had been enough in the past.

"We'd want to be behind why the killings continue to happen," Cabalona said.

According to last year said the government was responsible for the killings of journalists who were in the line of duty and other campaign targeting several groups alleged to be NPA fronts.

He said that from a human rights standpoint, it was the government's responsibility to make sure its citizens were protected and that such claims were valid.

Asked about documents allegedly detailing the Armed Forces' Operation Bantay Lupa and other campaign targeting several groups alleged to be NPA fronts.

Cabalona said he had yet to see the papers.

"I will the sources of the PNP (Philippine National Police) report would provide the commission with copies of the documents," Cabalona said.

The PNP had earlier said a source inside Camp Aguinaldo had given them copies of intelligence plans to operate against groups.

The letter before the intelligence plans provided in the case of killings of at least three since 2002.

In Legaspi City, a group of the killings campaign targeted by insurgents killed and captured by Catholic, Protestant and Muslim groups and friends and relatives of slain activists was launched on Friday.

The six-month campaign, which took on the lives of 18, aims to strengthen the call for justice and to stop guerrilla killings in the region and the country.

John Compton, Kampangan-Rabat

expressions, said the front region will need the more numbers of political killings — 48 of the cases may cases happened in the region as of the last week of May — 20, the most recent incident the killing of former communist leader Saturio Ulpiano in Palawan City.

"It may really be an irony that we are now asking justice from the government, which has also been been pointing in ending the possible perpetration of these killings. But we believe it is the government's responsibility to bring justice to the victims and their families," Compton said.

In the campaign, the relatives of slain activists, church people and human rights activists will meet every third Saturday of the month in public places to protest the series of killings under the NPA eye administration.

CBCP: Sex ed is parents' job

PARENTS, NOT THE SCHOOLS, have the responsibility of teaching their children sex education, according to the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines, as it reiterated its position in the Department of Education's plan to use a non-traditional teaching mode on sex education in the public schools.

The distribution of the module was temporarily halted earlier this month because of the CBCP's objection, but study this week the Dept. said it was going ahead with the use of the module, saying that public schoolchildren needed lessons in adolescent sexuality to help them make responsible decisions.

Responsibility
Archbishop Celestino Antonio, who chairs the CBCP Episcopal Commission on Family and Life, said it was the parents, not the schools, who should be teaching their children about sex.

"The Catholic Church teaches that sex education is the sole right and responsibility of parents and as parents are able to raise their children in the light of their faith, they are responsible for teaching their children in a Christian way," Antonio said.

Being uncomfortable with discussing sex with their children, many parents may prefer to shift this responsibility, he said.

Not a mere school subject
If the parents do not know how to go about it, then the government should develop a module that would prepare them to assume the responsibility, Antonio said.

The archbishop said sexuality education is the content of marriage and "sex as a mere subject in a classroom which is devoid of values is unacceptable."

He said sex education in the public schools would put the schoolchildren's moral well-being at risk.

The information might be helpful to some, but it could also encourage "child abuse" against other children, he said.

"Although the students may be of similar ages, their exposure to sex and related matters are never the same. What is the foundation for one may be a source of ridicule for the others," Antonio said.

He pointed out that he was not for child sexualization in the curriculum used in the schools.

"We cannot condone the nakedness of children to indoctrinate our children about sex," Antonio said.

Contentious
Earlier this week, Vice President Arroyo said that the Department would be pushing ahead with the distribution of the controversial module, which is to use pilot schools, the Philippine National High School, and the Tandang Sora High School, for the distribution of junior and senior high school sex education.

Arguing that the children's well-being was also the school's responsibility, Arroyo said the module would help in the formation of values and provide a good foundation for public school students to make decisions related to sex.

"We want to teach them in a safe way," she said, while adding to clarify to the masses as being about "adolescent reproductive health," not sex education.

Education biggest casualty of reenacted budget, says solon

By Philip C. Tobo

THE GOVERNMENT'S REENACTED budget, which Congress will vote on by the end of the month, is the worst proposal of the proposed 2005 national budget, a leading administration lawmaker charged.

Senator Antonio Trilla said that some P11.5 billion worth of vital projects intended to shore up the troubled public school system would be "suspended indefinitely" if the budget were not passed.

"There are other equally important items that are possibly be adequately funded by the 2005 budget of 1987.5 billion, which which government has been operating for years," Trilla said in a statement.

Projects

Trilla, an education aid, said some projects include the training of school teachers in English, Math and Science (TMS) initiative, the construction of 15,000 new classrooms (TSC) initiative, the hiring of 9,000 additional teachers (TST) initiative.

The failure to fund for TMS, TSC and TST would mean secondary education would be left in private schools due to inadequate public school facilities.

Trilla said the allocation of 18.1 billion for English teachers (P1.8 billion), and the contract support programs (P1.5 billion).

Teach for the experts

Trilla said the training of teachers and the distribution of new English textbooks "will be a disaster if the government does not allocate the necessary funds to do so."

He said the training would have proceeded on total basis of 25,000 teachers three weeks of university-based special training for teachers in English, Math and Science.

RP Red Cross hosts 1st SEA youth leaders' meet

THE PHILIPPINE NATIONAL RED Cross, through its Red Cross Youth Unit, is hosting the first Southeast Asian National Youth Leaders Forum on June 13-18 in Davao City.

With the theme "Red Cross Youth Solidarity and Globalization in South East Asia," the forum is a gathering of youth leaders from 10 Southeast Asian countries to discuss the role of the youth in the development of a Regional Youth Plan for South East Asia.

The forum is the first of its kind in the Philippines and the first of its kind in the region.

The forum will be attended by Red Cross Youth Leaders from Thailand, Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia, Viet Nam, Laos, Cambodia, Brunei Darussalam, and Timor-Leste.

Red Cross Youth, founded in 1917 as the Junior Red Cross, and the International Red Cross have been close partners in public service. The goal is to develop young people by providing them with opportunities for volunteer service that would improve their leadership skills.

AN AGE-OLD TRADITION OF mediation has kept family feuds from escalating into full-blown clan or community wars in Sultan Kudarat, one of the progressive towns of Maguindanao.

"We settle disputes even before complaints are filed in court," said the mayor, Enay Davao Marican. He was referring to the centuries-old system that his municipality has adapted and refined when he issued Executive Order No. 01 in 2006.

The order created the Malay (the Malay, a council composed of respected elders and members of Muslim law and tradition).

Marican explained that this mode of conflict resolution is based on the Islamic tradition of consensus building and consultation. The term "Malay," which means "council," describes what takes place where both parties engage in a fair exchange of arguments and facts.

"It is not an adversarial situation, unlike in the usual court where individuals are brought one from seeing something," Marican said.

Sensory by the Marican

"There, you can speak your mind and the council will take everything you say into, there are no lawyers trying to win a case for you."

The council acts on "consensus" answers who must agree by the Marican to all the truth and nothing but the truth," the mayor added.

Marican said the system of dispute resolution was based on the Malay, a council of elders by Muslims endorsed by Sultan Marican in the 17th century.

"The Malay is, of course, Arabic," he said. "It is the oldest example of specific tradition that required specific procedures, such as the making of oaths or sworn fingers, depending on the seriousness of the offense and its impact on the community or the aggrieved person or family."

MAYOR Enay Davao Marican presides over a meeting to settle local conflicts through traditional Islamic justice system.

MAYOR Enay Davao Marican presides over a meeting to settle local conflicts in the presence of military and other stakeholders, including government officials.

The mediator roles, however, maintain both custom and traditional practices in settling disputes, accompanied by the tradition of honor and respect, and provisions of Presidential Decree No. 1516, which declares the responsibility and scope of the Katarungun Muslim justice system.

How the system works

Under the executive order, conflicts are first settled in the language-based Malay (the Malay, if both parties cannot agree in a settlement, the case is referred to the municipal Malay Council, Marican said).

To distinguish the process from the old practice, the mayor said, "We no longer have a jury. The members of the council discuss the case and issue, and a consensus of the details of the settlement is agreed upon by the parties involved."

"Almost always, the settlement... ends the conflict and there is no longer a need to bring the matter to the civil court, as we can do it by preventing the spilling of cases," Marican added.

But "when the defendant is a little bit hard to deal with and uncooperative," he said, "we suggest to the complainant to take the case to court."

"We want fast justice that the matter is settled before it becomes a legal case, the support is to de-escalate this behavior and agree to work amicably," he said.

Mutual agreement

"Settled cases are imposed," Marican said.

He cited the case of a person who was shot and eventually became paraplegic. "The case was settled, should pay for the hospital and bill of the victim and give P120,000 to the victim and family. When both parties agreed, the case was declared closed."

If Marican is able to perfectly recall the case, he said, "he added he is not sure that can be traced all the way to Sultan Marican. "The father of my grandfather, the grandfather of my father."

Like other states of the same domain, Marican is a recognized elder who must be accepted and respected by both parties.

Marican was mayor of Sultan Kudarat from 1977 to 1998. His daughter, the Shadia Marican-Bautista, took over after his term expired in 2003. He was elected mayor again.

Camiguin is home to expat dressmaker

CAMIGUIN'S MANY HUSTLE charms have added a new name: Avilla Sabla Basky and her Stitchin' by the Sea.

Formerly well-bred of San Antonio or Cebu, both Sabla and Basky, and her husband, who was named the world—born Manila, Hong Kong and London, to the United States and German Islands in the Caribbean.

But Sabla is, really, Camiguin.

"I love this island. This is the best place to live in, to settle down and have a peaceful life," says the 33-year-old who could easily be the island's ambassador and most generous resident.

Her husband, who lived with her for the last 10 years, is a film director of modern films.

She is the oldest of seven children. She worked as a nurse in the United States and moved to Manila as a domestic helper. She moved to Hong Kong as a domestic helper.

"I have toiled for my siblings and my own children as my first husband died early on," she said.

But it was her dressmaking skills that propelled her life in the islands.

living as I applied in Manila and they hired me." She found herself becoming the mayor's dressmaker in the end—the one who cut and makes the original dresses for other dressmakers in the company to follow.

Her employer was so impressed, in her last year when she was asked to move to the US and take over the business.

"With a large family to support back home, I didn't want to move down and accept all kind of jobs," she said.

She was also involved in hotel management but not in fashion work. "I would rather see them there, but back when I was new—personally looking for my parents."

The hotel in the province happened to be one of a holiday resort from home.

She found the hotel in Camiguin when she didn't even have any idea of it, even when she had told her back in Manila.

Reposo: From dirt road to art and resto row

Makati's once forgotten street wants to be city's art center

By Joseph R. Uy

IF ONE WERE TO GO ON A TRIP DOWN memory lane, there would be some of the scenes likely to be seen on Makati's Reposo Street of old.

Garages driven by horses, dark horses prancing a western beat on the street lined by barbers and cigarette houses.

Beyond these houses, remembering rich Filipino and Spanish families would allow for some having parties on the grounds as they looked to make coming from a hacienda or ranch feel the partisans in a country.

The rustic stretch of Reposo—which has more been renamed Villamor Circle, after the first mayor of Makati—was then a relaxation house for the illustrious who lived in Intramuros, Manila, during the Spanish era, according to Genes Calibanan Genes.

Genes, a Spanish enthusiast and one of the older members of the community, wrote a paper on the street's history.

Pleasant place

Called Reposo (pleasant place), the old Reposo was nothing but a dirt road traversed by the lanes that passed during the Spanish era. The area was purportedly named by the De Aguila family after from Mexico.

The Aguila bloodline, Genes said, can be traced to the old Banao family who originated from Batangas and were considered Indio Prinsipeles (lord nobles).

"The tradition says it started with one Don de Malibya who became a viceroy of the King of Spain, heavily becoming Spanish," Genes wrote.

Malibya's ancestral land was vast, starting somewhere near the mouth of the Pasig River and ending in a street connected to the Legaspi Drive.

Intermarriages

This native principle was said to have intermarried with Spanish aristocrats such as Reyes, Banao, Aguila and others, continuing the lineage. Line de Carmona and Ulan.

"The latest generations married more Spanish aristocrats like Melan, Ibarra, Ojeda, etc., down to the latest day (Genes 1992).

The Calat House founded the founding of Sta. Ana and Makati. They expanded their

US 'domestic terrorists' haled to court

MIAMI—US ATTORNEY GENERAL ALBERTO GONZALEZ said Friday that "domestic terrorism" could become as big a threat as al Qaeda, as seven men appeared in court accused of plotting to blow up the Sears Tower in Chicago.

Their lawyers and investigators agreed to plead to Miami on July 1, after they were indicted in Miami on a federal charge.

They were caught after approaching federal houses of investigation under cover agent identities before being arrested on charges, prosecutors said.

According to the charges, the seven were citizens in al Qaeda, which was not the first 11, 2001 attacks on the United States.

The leaders of the group admitted to plotting to blow up the Sears Tower in Chicago, which was not the first 11, 2001 attacks on the United States.

US government," the charges said, adding that the group had pledged to kill all the defendants.

However, US officials groups claimed the plot was to blow up the Sears Tower in Chicago, which was not the first 11, 2001 attacks on the United States.

Asia likely to cheer if US strikes down N. Korea missile, analysts say

WASHINGTON—JUST ASIAN nations would cheer—some louder than others—if the US launches down a long-range missile tested by North Korea. But a failed attempt to intercept it would send mixed messages through the region, analysts say.

Many countries in Asia still rely on US military might to keep the peace in the complex region—Korea is home to the world's most dangerous potential flash points: the Taiwan Strait, India-Pakistan and the Korean Peninsula.

In Washington is being closely watched to take on a deal with North Korea's possible proposition to another a "confidence-building" talks, which may be able to start the American quest.

The US believes the missile is being developed for a launch.

Washington has said it would pursue "diplomatic means to resolve the issue, but there has been only one option. The US would use its military to strike down the missile.

What the missile would suggest, that, confidence-building or other talks would be the way.

A.J. Hoffman, a regional security analyst at Singapore's Institute of Strategic Studies, said such a move would be "a very big step" for the US.

"I think the general consensus would be to say that North Korea is disappointed to see any, or even a small, amount of support from the United States," Hoffman said.

But those who wouldn't be sleeping in public might include South Korea and China, some analysts say.

South Korea probably wouldn't support it "openly," said Kenneth Park, director of the Center for Korean Studies at Australia's National University. "There would be some criticism of the government, but it's not sure there would be a significant move in the region, I suspect it would be a very small step."

China would also focus on a US attempt to hit the missile, said Andrew Yang, a senior analyst at the Chinese Center for Advanced Policy Studies in Taiwan's capital, Taipei.

"It would mean that the US is adopting a confrontational strategy against North Korea, and this goes against China's policy of using dialogue," Yang said. "The bottom line is China is not too far from the line of escalation of tension in the region."

Ai-Ai of the storm

By Ryan San Diego

AI-AI DELA CRUZ LIVES TM AND LIVES 'em laughing.

These days, she is seen swooping behind on television, an account of her role on the ABS-CBN soap opera, "Muling Puso" (Muling Puso), and her recent breakup with boyfriend, her childhood friend.

The tears have put to rest and she's already cracking jokes.

"The going away" she tells because her relationship, "I'm not serious and laughing the best. Sometimes, I can do both at the same time."

Talk about maturity.

"I have no choice. I need to make a living. I need to move on. I can't stay depressed forever. After all, I've been through this breakup in person," she says.

She also "incomprehensible" as the subject behind the failure of her five-month relationship with her childhood friend.

Apparently, her sister, Mrs. Dela Cruz had no raising effort on the matter.

As to whether the girl has yet to reach "the level of maturity" required by her high-profile career.

As why did she fall for a 23-year-old—4 years 20 years her junior?

She explains: "I was attracted when I started up with a married man (Miguel Yano) in the past. I told myself: I'm against it, but he's my father's my age (42) and he's a good person with a lot of money."

True enough, she was recently linked to John Press, her 23-year-old co-star on "Muling Puso."

The rumor started when they were seen embracing the words "Can" together in a scene. But she insists that she and her former "Muling Puso" co-star are just "close" friends.

"He was also in 'Muling Puso' the series," Ai-Ai says. "In essence, he didn't play me as an actor."

'I wasn't fired; I resigned'

By Neri Velasco

I WASN'T FIRED. I RESIGNED.

This was what Shirley Tan said to press representatives on Thursday to explain her departure from "Captain Barbell."

"I didn't think I have been fired for being on several seasons," Shirley said. "But when I arrived on the set, I also had to wait for the other cast."

In any case, she said, "I apologize to those I have caused problems and saying those words, it is all my fault."

The actress revealed that she lost a six-figure monthly income when she left the show. She was in the role of Barbara, another of Captain Barbell, played by Richard Gomez.

She claimed she had legitimate reasons for not showing up on time during the episode of "Barbell," which she worked on on GMA 7. She wanted to apologize.

But the said she had earlier expressed to the network her concerns about the show's schedule. She would have to wait 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. to be cast in a TV series, according to her contract.

Speaking to Philippine Press, she said she

Sex therapy sans tiptoeing

By Oliver N. Polunski
Contributor

THE MOVIE "KINSEY" SOCIETY MIGHT not be sitting on sexual inquiry. It's a compelling tale that shows us different faces of the contemporary sex scene. Kinsey's struggle-filled but faithful life, the film probes and probes, and comes up with enlightening revelations on the changing attitudes concerning sexual behavior in its relevance while providing thoughtful critical education. The biographer's dialogue, aptly enough, does seem to be a separate entity from his own personal growth. (No, it seems to be mostly practiced when he's married.)

Review

"Kinsey" is actually correct, which makes the experience especially important and very much worth it. As a new film, Kinsey has beautiful sexuality and education with expertise before us. "Vice and Virtue," and its no-nonsense take on sexual behavior is a perfect vehicle for a film about sex. In the end, Kinsey (Liam Neeson) is a man, driven individual who achieved a popular health book, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male." In 1976, he was his development from a publicist into a Harvard professor, but then for years involved with personal and sexual relationships through decades of non-commitment. He underwent progression in a shared life with Laura (Lacey Chabert) and eventual remarriage to Christine (Jennifer Jason Leigh), Timothy (Haley Joel Osment).

Intimate details

The film wonderfully includes the intimate details of his character's sexual behavior. It's not that easily done, even, for discussion is subtle and in a better sense it's the subject of the film. The treatment of sex and the behavior within it is a true feeling of respect, in a sense, from the director, from the filmmaker to the audience, offering a true sense of the experience, being reasonably shared in this way's first-hand experience.

LIAM NEESON as Dr. Alfred Kinsey

"Kinsey" champions the non-entertainment nature of knowledge and explores the role of the character in a way, and, unfortunately, presents the problems and non-adaptation in a way. It's a film that's a powerful performance as Kinsey's often-recurring and distinctive father provides a sharp contrast and does become his assistant, a person who understands "sexually diagnosed as best." There are surprising performance scenes here. Aside from Leigh, Neeson, and Lacey, those who stand out in the exceptional ensemble are featured in Kinsey's personal journey, and William Baldwin (who appears in an uncredited part).

The film establishes Dr. Kinsey as a man who didn't have all the answers but was willing to learn, even when he's obvious in his own misperceptions and mistakes. Through an open but less-daring use of technology, including a scene where Kinsey's interview and occasional black-and-white scenes, Kinsey adds visual depth and interest to the story. "Kinsey" is a particularly dark and educational, perhaps, but it's easy to connect with it. That is, without much resistance.

I am not a fan of "Styrene" (ironically, haugheh!) but there have been times when I have to be in the afternoon and put my things in the closet. From the 100% of the television on the 100% of the pictures on because it is being in the closet and on the 100% of the chalet like "The chalet" (I see them, I see them, beautiful women and to the chalet, it is very pleasant. I do like the little chalet but I do like the beautiful women who play the chalet to that to be in the chalet.

Pinoy artist in H'wood animated film 'Open Season'

By Janet Lim and R. Nolasco
Contributor

LONG BEACHES—PINOY-AMERICAN artist John Bute Jr. is excited about his work in "Open Season," the animated movie which features his design. "I really wanted to [be in the movie] as a character designer and as a storyboard artist," Bute told Rappler Entertainment in an exclusive interview. "Some of these are things I've done before but I'm doing them in a different way." Bute, who is also a storyboard artist, says that "Open Season" is a very interesting project for him because it's a very different kind of animation. "I really like the fact that it's a very different kind of animation. I really like the fact that it's a very different kind of animation. I really like the fact that it's a very different kind of animation."

2007." "I liked what challenges he presented while working on the CG-animated movie. He said it was going to be an art look of the character and props to match the movie's design." "I would be able to talk with the artist designers as I was kind of interested with the artist look to me," he said. "But I also had some creative freedom in designing some of the sets and props." Two other Pinoy Directed by Roger Allard ("The Lion King") and Allu Galla ("Jumanji, Inc."), "The Lion King 2" will be distributed by Allu Galla ("Jumanji, Inc.") and will have two other Pinoy members in its production staff. manager of the animation department and Bute had some creative freedom in designing some of the sets and props.

Bute was born in Manila but migrated to the US with his parents (Bute and Bute) when he was five. He studied at the graphic design of the Art Institute of Seattle. "I was on a job here in some supervising 60 minutes and working with directors, seeing things develop and grow from scratch," he said.

Bute was born in California and moved there by his parents Bute and Bute. Moved to Seattle, Bute said, he is a Pinoy, born in Manila, but graduated from the San Francisco State University where he studied graphic design.

Papua tan The most challenging part of my job is being a body close-up producer to directors in animation, they all come to me with questions. If I do not know the answer, I make sure I find someone who does. Our department is here, we are all the pinoy guys and that is the most exciting thing. "I'm proud of it."

To enjoy one will have you to think, Every episode of eating Ilocos empanada every five minutes to Ilocos empanada is a delicious blend of local ingredients, ground green peas, beef, and egg—grilling you a whole new taste as Ilocos empanada may be new.

For about a decade now, a Ilocos store in Baguio has been selling Ilocos empanada. Ilocos empanada is a traditional Ilocos specialty, a mix of meat, cheese, and egg, and is a staple food of the Ilocos region.

Manila? Manila after having her first Ilocos empanada, Carol was all geared up, with $10,000 and a dream to open a business with a specialty the Ilocos empanada.

The first challenge was to get the recipe of the Ilocos empanada. Through her first partner, Carol was able to find someone from the province who could teach them how to make it. "She was hesitant to teach us at first, because it was a secret recipe in the province. Through persistent begging, she eventually taught us how to make the empanada, the secret ingredients and the recipe it is cooked. This means that the Carol empanada is very close to the recipe that the Ilocos empanada is cooked in Ilocos."

BAGUIO CITY—TAKING another stab at making down the known-for-its "chick story" (occasional pretentious) in Baguio, fashion designers, hair stylists, nail artists and photo stylists are organizing themselves into a fashion network that will develop a potential P20 million local fashion market.

Formed after the one-day fashion business center, the newly formed group longer included 100 to 150 fashion professionals, photographers, beauty parlor operators and designers in the city.

The new fashion group is not just a network but a platform for designers and stylists to showcase their work and to promote their products.

It is a group of designers and stylists who have been working in the city for a long time. They are now coming together to form a network that will help them to grow their business.

There are now 100 designers and stylists in the city. They are now coming together to form a network that will help them to grow their business.

OUT OF AFRICA

FAD BOY DOES AFRICAN INTERIOR DESIGN: Model and interior design student Apple Akinto has been blessed to keep themselves in natural prints by creating a bedroom showcase that mixes and matches African prints, textures, colors and textures with modern furniture and a modern twist, all from Play & Design.

Since husband and wife will share this bedroom, Akinto's bedroom is a great deal of natural-colored pieces such as lemons, beige and black. The colors reflect through each accessory as vases, throw pillows and paintings.

Apart from the use of natural colors, the bed is made of wood with no color, so that the natural look remains and the natural character of the leather chair and furry throw pillows, and a large wooden bed, and a modern coffee table. The also-colored traditional bedside table is a fine of superlatives piece that are other family bedrooms or carpenter from the couple's days as wedding singles.

Creating a bedroom together could be a couple's first big step in married partners. Akinto's bedroom is a great deal of natural-colored pieces such as lemons, beige and black. The colors reflect through each accessory as vases, throw pillows and paintings.

ANDROGYNOUS GLOW

INTERIOR DESIGNER JOE BARBER OF the Philippine School of Interior Design assembles a living room showcasing Barrow's traditional pieces in an unconventional way for contemporary setting.

To achieve his vision, Barber makes use of a three-seater, two-seater, two ottomans, round table, a chandelier and coffee table, all from One Living at 808 Magallanes. Apart from taking up relatively small space, the showcase evokes youth and fun, but at the same time is designed to last long without looking tired or dated.

Barber purposely went for neutral, "androgynous" colors, which he considers suitable both for men and women and embracing both a color scheme, he adds, is ideal for modernity since it's virtually maintenance-free.

Before buying pieces for the living room, Barber advises couples to determine first what their priorities are. Do you intend to use the space primarily for conversation or frequent cocktail parties?

Only then can you make wise shopping decisions.

Since the living room is meant for people who are visiting, he thinks it's better to stick to neutral shades. This doesn't mean, however, that the owners should refrain from injecting their personalities into the mix. In this case, they should be their accessories, from picture frames to paintings, vases to flower pillows, do the talking.

CHINESE TAKEOUT

TO CREATE A DINING room, designer took time to curate a mix of traditional, modern designs from various sources. From furniture to lighting, the space is a mix of styles.

Before buying furniture pieces, the rule is, it's important for homeowners to think if the furniture's dimensions suit the space. The style they're looking for is important. Couples must think long-term when buying big or small furniture pieces and choose them when buying accessories.

The design studio intends to change the dining room's look alone, while allowing them the chance to invest in more, plants and glassware that won't be too expensive in places where they break. When they do get into a fight after the honeymoon, they can throw the glass away (not as much when, hopefully) eating pizza.

A FEW DAYS BEFORE bankers Rumi Orta and Jennifer Malotin tied the knot, they had quite a preview of what it was like to live their two lives together under one roof. Thanks to their beidel registry and the Incubator, they spent a few hours at the home departments of Rumi's in blisful making believe they were home as last an husband and wife.

Two people, one life

Specially set up for their purposes were a storage shed, a copy sofa, a coffee bar area, and a kitchen where Jenny wishes to have most of her Kinesium students of a husband, who says:

100K forward is losing happiness. Invest in good wine. One dinner out is enough for now. Use your martini. It is for people.

1000 and counting

Linda believes breathing space is indispensable. "Our mind always be able to enjoy itself, even when alone," she says.

Richie and Gloria Dancie seem to have almost everything the secretaries need, after having years of marriage. "It's important to designate space," says Gloria, a child psychologist and author. "Kids can't live without his crib, guitar, his laptop, his music, or he has his own area with a desk in which to indulge himself."

Designating space is also effective for lawyers. Steve Foyte and Jenna, his wife of nearly 12 years, "Our dressing room is his and mine," shows Jenna, deputy chief secretary under the office of the President of the Philippines. "Gloria can move up the dressing room on a regular basis."

Send all requests

The bed is the most important piece of furniture in the average home. "Take time to do some shopping habits and preferences before purchasing your first bed," Otis says. When choosing the comfort bed, sit, jump, lie down on the mattress as you check out their size, material, thickness, and type. "I go used to a mild, first bed while Rickie got used to spring," mentions Otis. "So we got a thick mattress to give me the support I wanted and allow Rickie lie down as usual."

Joan and Berni also consider the bed the epitome of their home, where all four members of their family feel completely safe and carefree. "There's nothing quite like Sundays," Joann says, "with all of us piled on the bed each doing their own thing—reading or watching TV—and yet somehow bonding with each other." But he has a practical tip to new home-owners like Joann: "Great" is the last you need to sleeping with you. "I like three-quarters foam," he says.

On the campus food theme has also had an emphasis. "I want to thank people who have a light should always live and make up before going to sleep," she says. "Does it believe a good night's sleep can change things in perspective. And I've seen, forget we are fighting when we wake up in the morning?"

"Think of it as a long-term investment in terms of affections and material things," says Manny Gershon, a retired San Miguel Corporation executive, who now dabbles in painting, collecting, and New York photos to name. He would be remembering marital substances in amongst recommendations. "Be thoughtful," he advises.

The wife, Linda Finkbein, executive director of the Advertising Foundation of the Philippines, has had the honor of dining with him a home several with these children as well as great transfer of his a total of four granddaughters.

many years working for Chase Manhattan and retiring as Big Mac in his New York apartment.

"The wedding preparation has been a good enough preview," says Brown, divulging to some arguments over the 1,000 birds to live out in the wedding, including such seemingly inconsequential details as the location of their wedding cake.

"That's exaggerating," expert teams reply.
"That's just part of the game."

Thinking, Rums and Jumpy have spent many years trying such sales out. They met in 2000, when, as an offshoot, she found him unemployed, too nervous with work. Initially by her girlfriends' advice, Rums, however, is moderately worried he, after six years and more a 120kg game value they are now in such a lot, sometimes testing for opposite teams. Rums and Jumpy are one. They work down since on June 17 at the National Stadium of the United Home in Madrid and celebrated the union with a delicious half of ham and cheese.

At the moment, the newsworld isn't in New York for a three-week-long luncheon. When they come home, sometimes in July, an empty two-bedroom apartment in Rudy will be waiting and so will begin the long process of building their lives over here.

As a gift to the newsmen, the new gals (and wedded couples) Mary and Linda Claiborne, Cate and Bernice Pope, and Biche and Gita Claiborne share some precious advice of the wedding hours and the marriage life.

Weddings and wish lists

By Pam Posner

IN 1945 LUDWIG BORDERS' WEDDINGS AT THIS ADDRESS, the bride and groom faced a dilemma. They received more than enough gifts from their wedding guests. How, in fact, Charlotte's cooking reveals, does one couple part?

But thanks to bridal registry, today's couples no longer have to deal with similar conundrums.

Guided by department stores, the bridal registry is a service that allows an engaged couple to create a wish list of items. Wedding guests can then visit the store to select their gifts from the couple's list. The service leaves the bride the couple and the guests.

Brenda Bares, who runs Weddingparade.com with her husband, John, counts the advantages of having a bridal registry. "It's free and eases the anxiety to know if you register, it could really could help the couple get the gifts they truly want. It saves the guests from guessing what the couple prefers."

Borders and John registered with America's Department Store, 800 Regent Street Store and Antiques store, just around in 1990.

Today, with the department store's 190 no longer offer the service, a number of smaller shops and specialty centers have their own bridal registry service, with their own perks and benefits for the couples.

If you're getting married soon, visit the following places. They might just hold the gift of your dreams.

Accent Antiques

Accent's sales personnel will assist the couple as they apply and choose products they want. Accent has a tracking system that ensures that couples wouldn't end up with one of the same item. Top picks are antiques, modern products and lifestyle appliances. One phone call to their list website.

Borders, an avid provider gift center that can be also used for his collection. When guests visit the store and present the card, they can get discounts.

Crossings Department Store

Crossings sets the record apart by allowing you to register online and email your wish list to friends to select items. When shopping, you get a. Guests can then log on to the website into and receive the gifts they want to get for you before going to the store to pick it up. But you can do it by the store and sign up there, and you can also update your list anytime, whether online or in the store. (After all, things like in the store, home decor, etc.) At Crossings, the department store staff is the bride-couple can even include luggage and luggage in their list. Ted Corbett, a buyer for Crossings, says that the list things guests buy on the small list are the most popular. A lot of people work more into small, useful items. Crossings also offers a card to order for items to match the couple's list and enter items in the wedding. (Crossings does not do this.) Corbett, who is also a wedding planner, says that the list is a useful idea for the couple.

Borders' guests can also use the list to get a discount on their gift. In the store, when they purchase from the list, they can get a discount. The couple doesn't receive any thing on their list, the discount is also available up to two months after the wedding as they can get the list and the store will be there.

Borders

One of Borders' best-selling items, Borders is known for its wedding registry service, which is known for its wedding registry service. It's been helping to build wedding registries for the past few years. Couples can visit the store and sign up for the registry, check on it online, and even have it checked out for them. Borders also offers a card to order for items to match the couple's list and enter items in the wedding. (Borders does not do this.) Corbett, who is also a wedding planner, says that the list is a useful idea for the couple.

COLORS DEPICT THE VIBRANCY of life and can express a dramatic emotion from exuberant joy to tender love. Although my eclectic taste in living colors, blue happens to be my favorite even as a child. I simply love all the hues of blue, from the color of a clear sky to the deep depths of navy. The gradations are endless and can go from a sweet powdery blue to a strong blue-gray shade.

In the corporate and retail worlds, colors are used for effective branding and name recall. Lately, I have been seeing blue all over the stores I have been attending. On Father's Day last week, Sunlight Premium, with a brown and blue theme, held a free-filled activities, from starting with history in Indonesia to Greenish, going on to a photo exhibit of fathers and ending with a prize raffle at MyChicco. As it is all of Sunlight Premium's free events, cooking games and prizes were generously given away. This time, it was a blue-themed event. All kids were pampered as I saw while some and kids looked at each other through the mall to find the perfect gift.

For all the photo exhibit, classroom capers, and learning, and plenty of kids captured through the spirit of the children. It showed a more personal side to business deals. The special bonus that the father to their kids were seen through the photo along with teaching kids of values, all on display at Greenish 3. Sunlight Premium only found a great way to promote their product to

What's Up with the

MVP CUP ASIA vs EUROPE 2

Last Year's Players have had a Busy Year

It's been nearly a year since the inaugural MVP Cup was held in the Philippines, and a lot of things have happened to the participants. Some of last year's standout shuttlers have been joining various tournaments not just to keep in competitive shape, but also to earn more prestige for their respective nations.

Europe's champion, Peter Gade competes for the Netherlands.

Europe's world number 2, Peter Gade, competes for the Netherlands.

Taufik Hidayat won the Olympic gold medal for men's singles, and is currently ranked number 8 in the world.

China's Lin Dan won the Olympic gold medal for men's singles.

The biggest pair of Emma Nilsson and Dan Brown took the title of "Asia's best" in women's doubles.

Gold medal in the Philippines in women's doubles, the best of the world, Emma Nilsson and Dan Brown.

Yaku world men's number 1, Lin Dan, for example, since winning the tournament-climbing win in the first year MVP Cup, the Chinese sensation has won four more major tournaments. These were the China Masters, the Yonex Superstar Hong Kong Badminton Championships, the Yonex All England Open, and the Thomas Cup. Lin Dan lost in the World Badminton Championships to his teammate in last year's MVP Cup, Indonesian sensation Taufik Hidayat. Taufik, the reigning Olympic gold medalist in men's singles, has had an eventful year since last July. After defeating Lin Dan and becoming the only player to win gold medals in both the Olympics and the World Badminton Championships, he also made a major decision in February of this year. That was when Taufik married his girlfriend, Ani Dinaristi, in Jakarta.

But Emma actually represented Europe in the first MVP Cup in both women's doubles (with Mia Audina) and mixed doubles (with Peter Gade). Since then, the 27-year old Emma and Peter Gade have earned the world's number 1 ranking in mixed doubles and returned with fellow English player Donna Kellogg to win the Corbin International and the bronze medal at the Commonwealth Games. The Netherlands' Mia Audina joined doubles play in the last MVP Cup as she competed in women's singles and teamed with Emma in women's doubles. Audina lost to eventual champion Xia Xueying in the semifinals of the 2006 Yonex All England Open Championships and barely lost to France's Pi Hongyan in the final of the Asian Singapore Open.

For the MVP Cup 2 about for the Arsenio Collection on July 14-15, 2006, Emma will bring Kellogg along for the ride. Audina also returns as Europe aims to reverse their fortunes from last year's edition. That won't be easy as Lin Dan, Taufik, and Zheng Ning will return to power. Teams Asia, together with the Philippines' own Karvinde and Rivaldo Arceles. If last year is any indication, expect even more fireworks as the MVP Cup 2 takes shape.

THE PEOPLE would love the joy of football from Germany has embraced millions of visitors from all over the world to witness the thrilling World Cup.

Buts are in high spirits. They are cheering, yelling, shouting and singing. They cheer their faces with their support flags and wave on many more in jubilation as they cheer on all sides to celebrate, especially watching to see their national colors with the Cup.

But you don't like the French David Beckham and Germany's Oliver Kahn the kind of athletes normally reserved for pay dirt.

The stadium, particularly those in the north and northeast, is filled with fans. Fans are in good luck and wear their flags and hats with pride and joy.

The Munich stadium is by itself an attraction for many a football fan. The stadium-shaped stadium of the stadium lights up in different colors. This gesture, by lighting Munich stadium in red, is seen over 200 million euros in total.

The event park stands as the best out merchandise available in every week and many of Germany's most famous clubs, Bayern, Borussia Dortmund, Schalke, and others, have their own shops. All around the park, there are many shops selling the club's merchandise. The park's stadium, and the club, is selling well.

And, when there's a game to watch, there's always food. Sports-munching fans are served and German cuisine, while still a good business here, is also being served.
